Transposing

leadership into a public health

setting, Rowitz

(2014, p. 6-11)

identifies and

describes 16

Principles of Public Health Leadership.

These principles
assist in understanding the role of public health leaders and how the setting of public health requires additional attributes.

However, in conclusion, Rowitz states that whilst there are differences between being a business leader and a public health leader, “Leadership

Public Health

is leadership no matter what system you are in”
(p. 14).
